The “Hummingbirds at Home” project will accept observations from the beginning of migration until the birds have left for the Fall. The project is to entice birders, non-birders, and people of all ages to become stewards for nature.

Participants can get involved year round by making recommended changes to their local hummingbird habitats, plus take steps to make a difference in our natural world.

This is a fun, family-friendly citizen science project that works in your backyard or from the kitchen window.
